

Author's Bio

Sawyer Conlon is a New York and New Jersey based artist and photographer. He began his career working in scenic design for local theatres, taking pictures of sets and shows from behind the scenes. Following Sawyer's passion for photography, he began schooling at The New York Film Academy where he worked on conceptual fine art projects exploring themes of spirituality and mythology. Influenced heavily by surrealism and the dada movement, his work explores the folklore and mysteries of small town America.
